SEN. SHORTRIDGE RECEIVES ENDORSEMENT OF GLENN CO. REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE

The Republican county central committees throughout the state are endorsing the candidacy of Samuel M. Shortridge for re-election. This shows the Republican party of the state are back of the senator. They know his loyalty to the Republican organization and to the great leader of that party, Herbert Hoover, and consequently are determined to keep a tried and true Republican in the United States senate.

Recently the Republican County Central Committee of Glenn County adopted the following resolutions:

"The members of the Republican County Central Committee of Glenn County, in regular meeting assembled, deem it both a privilege and an honor to have the opportunity upon this occasion to heartily endorse the candidacy for the Republican nomination for United States senator of the Hon. Samuel M. Shortridge, whose able and varied public services to the people of this nation during a period of economic depression and financial travail has made his name known, honored and respected throughout the land; a man whose past record has shown an earnest and sincere desire to be of service to the people of both state and nation; a man of strictest and most uncompromising probity, integrity and tenacity of purpose, having those qualities of mind and of heart which peculiarly fit him for the high office which he has held for the past 12 years, with honor to himself and advantage to the country he serves; a man of firm judgment, sound and cautious; a man of intelligent public spirit, and with an unflinching sense of honor and justice; a man whose past record has given him a position of high honor, and has made his views and opinions upon profound public questions sought after and respected in the house of congress; a man whose profound learning in the law and whose keen business judgment and acumen have at all times been used constructively and in aid of the policy and progress of all reconstruction as promulgated and endorsed by his Excellency, Herbert Hoover, president of the United States.

"NOW THEREFORE, be it resolved that the members of this committee commend to their public and brethren throughout the state, the necessity of retaining in office a tried and true legislator, scholar and patriot, and take great pleasure in unqualifiedly endorsing the candidacy of the Hon. Samuel M. Shortridge.

ONLY 1932 REGISTRATIONS GOOD FOR YEAR'S ELECTIONS

Because a "permanent registration" law was adopted last year, the erroneous belief persists that those voters who were registered last year are now enrolled for all elections henceforth. But that is far from fact. The old register was automatically voided with the passing of 1931. Only the registrations made since December 31, 1931, become part of the permanent registration list. If you wish to vote in the presidential primary of May 3 and the other elections of this year's calendar, you must have registered in 1932. The time limit for registration for the May primary is March 24.

LONG HOURS AT DRIVING ENDANGER HUMAN LIVES

Testimony given at a railroad commission hearing the other day included an allegation that some of the "wildcat" or contract truck operators were overworking their drivers, sometimes compelling them to work from 15 to 24 hours without relief.

While work of any kind carried on under such schedules is bad for the worker, in the case of driving a motor vehicle it amounts to recklessness of criminal character. An exhausted or even drowsy driver is a menace to more lives than merely his own when continuing his job at the steering wheel.

RECALL NAMES SALADA BEACH UTILITY HEADS

Recall of M. O. Anderson and L. B. Belser and election of Joseph Schmidt and Frank L. Donahoe as successors, is asked today in a petition filed with County Clerk Elmore Hinman by 22 residents of the Salada Beach Public Utility District. The matter will come before the supervisors Monday.

Anderson and Belser were alleged to have failed to conduct the district's business fairly and impartially. They are also charged with being interested in the district's contracts.

S. P. Would Remove S. M. Crossing Gates

SAN MATEO, Mar. 9.—At the same moment that the Burlingame City Council was drafting a strong demand for gates at the Broadway crossing there, the San Mateo City Council received a communication from the Southern Pacific saying it had asked the railroad commission to permit removal of gates at four city crossings here.

Instead of the gates, the railroad is asking the right to install flasher-type warning signals.

The council referred the matter to City Manager Wilsey for a report.

Woodside

Woodside lost a personality from among its residents when Louis Bellmont moved to Redwood City last week. He is a master of his craft, the ancient and honorable but now declining trade of blacksmith. He learned his trade in Switzerland and in his hand iron is as pliable as wax. He was formerly in Colonel Roosevelt's troop of Rough Riders and took part in the charge up San Juan Hill in Cuba. Although he has moved to Redwood City with his family, he still spends his working hours at his forge at Woodside and his hammer rings upon the anvil as merrily as when King Richard's armor fashioned sword and battle-axe for his royal master.

Rev. Benjamin St. John, who has been suffering for some time from a bone infection in a finger of his right hand, was sent to the hospital by his doctor this week and an operation removing a part of the finger was performed.

A school election will be held at the Woodside school on Friday the 25th to elect a trustee for the Groesburg school district. The only candidate is the incumbent, O. E. Blackington. Mr. Blackington is a graduate of Oregon College of Agriculture and has graduated two children from the Woodside school. He has always been interested in educational matters, having served as school trustee in Oregon before coming to Woodside. His services on the board here have met with such appreciation that there is an insistent demand that he continue with the job.

Under the direction of Herman Simon, student teacher from the State College at San Jose, with the Woodside school, himself an expert tennis player, a tennis tournament was held last week at the local school grounds. Donald Wilkie won the cup and the championship title. Marian Neuman was his opponent in the finals and kept the issue in doubt until the last game.

Frank W. Mowwe and family left Woodside last week, having sold their home to Percy D. Jarvis, whose property adjoins. Lealand John has taken a lease upon the place and will take the occupancy of the new quarters on the first of April.

John J. Kelley spent last week over the mountain in charge of a crew of men clearing the brush from Native Sons' Park in preparation for its better utilization.

Mrs. Emma Andreen had her sister, Mrs. Johnson of Oakland, visiting with her last week.

The Portola Social Club will offer a card party to be held in Woodside on the evening of April first.

The rummage sale sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association at the school auditorium on Wednesday had all the drawing power of a three-ring circus. Many worthwhile objects were offered at bargain prices and the children were no more eager than their elders in hunting out the bargains. After all, what gives a greater thrill than the buying of something you want for less money than you would expect to have to pay for it? The sale added nearly $100 to the treasury of the association. Mrs. P. D. Jarvis was in charge of the affair.

After the expenditure of much labor thereon, the local municipal baseball diamond is ready for the season and the firemen's team will open with a game on Sunday against the team of the Redwood.

Woodman Will Now Up For Settlement

Alma Woodman of Redwood City, widow of William H. Woodman, has filed a notice for probate of his will. Woodman died here on February 28. The estate will not exceed $10,000. Two sons and two daughters are named as heirs. Woodman directed that his son, James, be cut off with $5 because of disappointments he has caused his father. This provision was made only on condition that Woodman follow his wife in death. He left the widow the whole estate.

MEANEST MAN
ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—Here's a new candidate for the title of the world's meanest man. Welfare workers were unloading a supply of food for poor people in front of the home of Mrs. R. M. Cox. As they took the food into her house, a man in an automobile drove up, whisked a 50-pound sack of flour into his car, and sped away before he could be caught.

City lodge of Moose.

The gardeners of Woodside have formed an association for study and mutual help in the solving of their problems. The organization is known as the Woodside Gardeners' Association and the officers are John L. Hughes, president; James Wilkie, secretary; Victor Canavesi, financial secretary, and Tony Silveria, treasurer. It is planned to hold monthly exhibits. A meeting has been called for the evening of March 21, at the school auditorium at which all professional gardeners in the vicinity are invited to be present to formulate plans for the year's work of the association.

Ask Handbill Ban

The Redwood City Lions, in a communication signed by Thomas Cutting, president, asked the city council to act favorably on the plea of the Redwood City Promotion Association to bar handbills from Redwood City homes and streets.

It was pointed out that most of the handbills were from out-of-town firms and were taking legitimate business away from Redwood City merchants. San Carlos, Burlingame, Palo Alto and San Mateo have such ordinances, the letter stated.

Councilman McCarthy suggested that City Clerk B. E. Myers inform the Lions Club that the council is awaiting a report from the merchants as to their wishes in the matter, and that early action will be taken.

Girl Scouts Given $50
The Sequoia District of Girl Scouts was given $50 toward its $1500 goal in the Redwood City area. The request was granted on motion of Councilman McCarthy, seconded by Councilman George McNulty.

The Loyal Order of Moose endorsed the $50,000 bond issue in a letter to the council.

The Redwood City Kiwanis Club, in a letter signed by James D. Hedge, thanked the board for voting funds for relief, saying the demands were heavy.

I did not have to ask her what they intended to do with Loren Garde, who, as far as they knew, had cast his lot with the forces of revolution, who had hidden his identity behind the masquerade of insanity. I knew.

"What have they done with Manuel?" she questioned. "Ah—Manuel; he of the dark face and heavy shoulders. They have done nothing; he is free—a good sailor and a brave man though some what stupid."

Now I laughed, laughed until I saw a deep hurt in her eyes and her chin begin to tremble, then I stopped, apologetic. "Perhaps," said I, "my moon-madness has never quite forsaken me."

She had called Manuel stupid! What was it Francisco had said to me? Ah, yes... "If the captain questions our innocence, and even be comes so suspicious as to confine us, there is yet Manuel and the mixed crew of this ship. Surely, Francisco had not done things by halves. If courage and brains would win, Bolivar would never lose."

"It helps you to laugh in the shadow of the gallows, Monsieur Garde, your moon-madness is a blessed gift." She turned away as though to leave me, but came back again. "I—I want you to know that I have tried so hard to save you, but I am helpless; I am not even a pawn in this tragedy they call the game of empire."

"May I crave a favor, Your Majesty—just one—before you go?" "Surely." She raised her fair face questioningly. "If there is aught—"

Now, while she kept her face upturned to me, I studied the smooth forehead, the high arch of eyebrow, the deep blue of her eyes, the quivering lips and the tender curve of cheek and chin.

"May I tell you that you are beautiful, and may I offer apology for having followed you, for having wounded you—for having wounded De Fuentes—for having for that night of madness and terror in New Orleans? I wonder if you have imagined me crazy."

"It is not that, Monsieur; I do not understand. I think we can not read America. That you should laugh at the gallows seems strange to me. And that you should have followed us from New Orleans. Is—is that the act of a sane man?"

"No, Your Majesty, it is not. Could I tell her of my mad worship, of that overwhelming love of mine: would that have gained anything for either of us? To have told her would merely have added to her unhappiness, for I had only a short night of life left to me."

"I am going to Adolfo," she said at last, "and tell him that the Senor Americano is not responsible. That the Venezuelans, Perez and Santini, held him captive. Adolfo will do much for me."

"But not that, Your Majesty, for Adolfo does not love me. He has every reason not to love me, for I have wounded him."

"I shall try, at least." "I knew she would fail, knew she would not return, so I tried every conversational subterfuge to detain her, with no success, for she extended a hand to me, smiling 'Adios.'"

Even as I held the slim fingers, the sound of a pistol shot came from the deck above us, followed by the roar of a commanding voice.

"Captain Alvarez," she said; "the voice of Captain Alvarez. What is it, Monsieur?"

Another shot, another yell; a shrill medley now, and swift, padding footsteps. Our guards disappeared in the gloom of the channel, running for the upper deck. The air was filled with the menace of an approaching storm as well as that of mutiny.

"What is it?" she screamed, holding to me. "What has happened, Senor, tell me!"

I laughed shortly. "The stupid Manuel is playing the game according to his orders. Unless something is done swiftly and well, this ship will be, very soon, in the hands of those who fight for Simon Bolivar. It is a floating arsenal, and is, therefore, a welcome prize for the revolutionists. We must act quickly."

"But you, Senor, are in the service—"

"Not at all; I have never served Francisco, nor Bolivar; only the Senorita—"

"Dulce," said she, completing my sentence.

Dulce! How prophetic had been that name, for it was at once a career, and a description. "Will you remain here, then, in safety while I—"

"No, Senor, no! I will go with you. There is Polito and—"

I knew she visualized Adolfo, but she did not call his name.

So, hand in hand we sped along the freight-cluttered channel. I led her to the companion ladder and half lifted her up through the quarter-deck hatch, from which position of vantage we were able to overlook the upper deck. It seemed at first deserted, but the report of a pistol came from the starboard rail about the mainmast, a shrill scream followed it, and a tall figure, lunging toward a slim boy whose body was braced against the bulwark, struck the rail, bent over it, and flopped back again to the deck, where he lay grotesquely flattened. A puff of smoke wafted above the two figures.

"Mother of G-d," the Senorita breathed. "Polito! My brother has killed a man!"

Now other figures raced from the fore-deck and the fore-castle; one of them, a heavy unwieldy figure with one bound arm, lifted a left hand and fired into the face of a sailor whose groping fingers, clutching wildly, found the throat of his adversary, and the two went down in a scrambling heap.

"Adolfo," cried the woman at my side, "Adolfo! Oh, the terror of this hour!"

"And this joy," I breathed, my soul at its height with the hope of freedom again.

"My brother," she gasped, "I must go to my brother!"

"Well... as long as she didn't want to go to Adolfo."

The elements now had begun to add their fury to the storm of human hatred that already possessed the ship. I had seen these tropical storms before, and I knew that the greatest danger for the contending human forces on her deck but in the power of the approaching tempest.

I made my way in the rising tumult of the storm to the wheelhouse, which, as I had suspected, was empty. My puny efforts to bring the craft around were poor enough; yet I knew that, riding before the rushing wind, the plunging ship was due for certain disaster.

Gasping, I clung tenaciously to the straining wheel. The Santa Lucrecia, pitching prodigiously, drove into the body of a mountain of blue-green sea, and the mizzenmast came down with a note of rent timbers that lifted above the din of the storm. It fell aft, crushing the wheelhouse, but I had dived out of the path of its fall and, buffeted by the waters, had come up short against the low wall of the after-deck.

Clinging desperately to a stanchion, I wondered if there was another soul alive on board the ship, which was now only a plaything of the storm. Faintly came the sound of another rending crash, and I imagined that the foremast had gone, for the laboring vessel, after heeling perilously whipped back to an even keel again.

While I crouched in the protection of the after-deck, the spirit of youth took hold of me, spoke to me—and the spirit of love also. She had come to see me, had glorified my prison, had let me feast my eyes upon the beauty of her face.

Spurred by a sudden resolve to find her, to save her, or to sink so the depths with her in my arms, I left my place of refuge and made my way by eccentric stages forward. I stumbled over a battered companion and rode the crest of a tumbling wave half the length of the deck. My outspread arms came in contact with a rail stanchion, and I held to it as the wave passed on.

In the piled-up masses of foam that beat over me I felt the clinging touch of a dress, my fingers found a slim arm, and I heard a shrill scream that rose above the roar of the tempest. The Senorita Dulce! In the semi-darkness she recognized me. A light of happiness took the place of the terror that had filled her eyes.

"Senor," she cried, the frail voice unconquered in the tumult, "I have been searching—"

I placed one arm around her, holding her close. "Are you afraid?"

"No," she said, smiling bravely and smiling, faintly.

Well, it was better. So, holding her, I waited for the storm to destroy us. I drew an abiding consolation from the thought that, if the sea claimed us, I should have her all my own to the last instant of my life.

Even as I waited thus the great ship stopped suddenly, as though it had met an invisible wall. The stern lifted skyward and the mainmast sheared clean at the partners, fell forward, tearing a great gap in the rail. Now the stern went down again with a sickening lurch and the bowsprit pointed toward the boiling clouds.

While the Santa Lucrecia, balancing upon a submerged reef that had caught her amidships, teetered like a sparrow on a twig, the rain ceased as suddenly as it had come, and the wind abated somewhat, though it still blew half a gale.

With the aid of the stanchion and the rail, I got to my feet and, staggering under the burden of the Senorita Dulce, went forward slowly along the plunging deck toward four men who were working at the davits of a starboard boat. A tall figure of the four resembled Francisco, so I bent my steps toward the larboard rail, where another group showed in the fading twilight.

Polito's anxious smile was a ghastly thing, for one side of his face was smeared with blood. He took his sister in his arms and turned to place her in the boat. As he did so Adolfo swung upon me with a clubbed pistol. I tried to dodge the blow and failed. The barrel of the weapon grazed my head and sent me spinning, and the tilting deck slipped from under my feet. Stumbling, I reached futilely for things to stay my descent, rolled, went through a wide space in the rail that the falling foremast had made, and fell for what seemed to my half-dazed senses immeasurable distances.

The plunge into the raging sea revived me instantly. I have always been at home in the water, so the danger of drowning was remote. Wind and the waves carried me swiftly landward as the short tropical twilight faded into a starless gloom. A floating spar touched me and, holding to it for support, I waited.

In the murk a towering mass of darkness passed me, passed me silently, like a lifeless derelict riding before a storm. It passed on, and I was left alone in the turbulent sea, a prey to doubts, to bitter disappointments and vague fears.

I heard at last the sounds of contact of the lashing sea upon the land. It was not the booming of breakers on a reef, nor yet the rasping hiss of waves that rode along a sloping beach; it was more like the rush of a mighty wind through the forest, whereat I wondered even more until a giant wave, receding, left me stranded in a tree. I held on while other waves rushed past and over me, held until the storm had spent its fury, until the water had subsided.

Wake Up Your Liver Bile —Without Calomel

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up."

They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Remedy a substitute. 25c at all stores. ©1931, C. M. Co.

TWO SCHOOLS ARE BURGLARIZED HERE

Sixty-five cents in small coins and a few articles of little value formed the total loot of intruders who broke into the McKinley and Lincoln elementary schools Monday and ransacked all of the rooms at leisure.

The lock on the office door of Miss Farn Moore, secretary of John Gill, superintendent of schools, at the McKinley school on Duane street, was broken off after entry had been gained by forcing a window. A pair of gloves and 25 cents in cash was taken.

Forty cents in change and minor desk furnishings were taken from the office of Miss Adelaide Eust, principal of the Lincoln school on Whipple avenue, where similar methods were used to enter the building.

Officer S. E. Douglass investigated the burglaries for the Redwood City Police Department.

Woodside Hen Lays Two Eggs In One

WOODSIDE, Mar. 8.—Aroused by the publicity given to a Redwood City hen which recently produced an unusually large egg, a Woodside hen went its rival one better today.

The Woodside hen, owned by Mrs. Ida Hubbel of Miramonte avenue, laid an egg 4 1/2 inches in circumference one way and 6 1/2 inches the other.

Mrs. Hubbel decided to use the contents of the egg, so she attempted to blow them out and keep the shell. To her surprise, she found another egg, apparently complete with shell and all, inside the first egg.

Menlo Park

MENLO PARK VOTERS MEET FOR WEEDEN AND HART: ACTIVITIES TAKING FORM

With campaign activities for the coming election rapidly shaping into definite form, the politically-minded citizenry of Menlo Park is once again beginning to sit up and take notice. A second public mass meeting of voters demanding the re-election of Menlo Park's popular mayor, W. H. Weeden, and the election of Edward H. Hart as city councilman, assembled at the Episcopal Parish Hall last Monday evening and again pledged its support to work together for the common good of Menlo Park. The announcement of committees in charge of the various campaign activities marked definite progress having been made since the nomination of the two candidates at the last public meeting, and plans covering further details of the campaign being made in their behalf moved forward with precision. Both candidates addressed the meeting. Mayor Weeden called attention to the progress of the city during the last two years of its administration, particularly emphasizing as an outstanding accomplishment the improvement of many public streets and the reduction in city taxes. Mr. Hart laid down a

"no mud slinging" plank in his platform and pledged himself to work in harmony for the common good of Menlo Park citizens.

A further public meeting will be held on Monday evening, March 21, and all Menlo Park voters interested in good government are expected to attend.

"The improvement of many of the worst of our public streets during this last administration is a credit to our city and stands as a monument to the civic pride of this community," declared Mayor Weeden. The mayor reviewed the highlights of the early struggle of the community to bring about civic improvements, and called attention to the fact that many of those who once attempted to stand in the way of civic progress now realize how much better off our community is now than it was two years ago, and are now among the administration's staunchest supporters.

"However, credit for our civic improvements is not due alone to your city council, but is due in a large measure to the persistence of the residents and property owners in demanding that such improvements be made," declared the mayor. "The accomplishments of the past two years are a tribute to the foresightedness of our people in working in harmony for the common good of our city. At no time has the city council ever acted in these matters except in accord with the wishes of the majority of the people affected."

In referring to the importance of economy in the administration of the city's affairs, the mayor stated that the five per cent reduction accomplished in the city's current tax rate was only a beginning and that further reductions must follow just as soon as conditions warrant their being made. "I've always endeavored to work for the common good of our community," he said, "and I shall always continue to do so."

In connection with the subject of improvements accomplished by the present administration, City Engineer Bert Mehl presented a brief tabulation of paving costs, showing by comparison that the cost of paving in Menlo Park was actually lower than in surrounding communities for similar types of construction. "While it is true that our improvements are not of an expensive type," he said, "they are of good quality and are substantial and adequate for the needs of the community. In each case they are what the majority of the people asked for."

Mr. Hart is running on a strictly constructive program with an eye to economy in the administration of the city's affairs. He expressed an earnest desire to become more intimately acquainted with people in the community whose ideas on city government might differ with his own, in an endeavor to bring about a more general common understanding in regard to such matters. He has no patients with "kickers" or "knockers" and particularly those of the "mud slinging variety" but is interested only in accomplishing constructive work for the common good and advancement of his home city.

Judge Hoss stated that he believes the city's government is best judged in the light of its past. "Until two years ago," he said, "Menlo Park was looked upon as a joke all over the state; today we are looked upon with respect. We are now getting along harmoniously." Referring to the matter of civic improvements, he said, "During the past two years our city administration has always had the wishes of the people uppermost in mind. Its attitude under the guidance of Mayor Weeden has been one of splendid co-operation."

City Attorney George K. Whitworth briefly outlined the progress of the city's administration since the time of incorporation. "For the past two years we have all enjoyed a relation of co-operation and harmony among the members of our city council. It can not be denied that this has been by far the most important factor aiding the advancement of Menlo Park. The accomplishments of the past two years are something of which this city may well be proud. From my contact with Mayor Weeden I know that he has ever had the interests of the people of this community at heart. His patience, fearless honesty and square dealing mark him as a man whose services this city government can not afford to be without. The city has gone forward under Mayor Weeden's administration; it must continue to go forward, therefore why change? The nomination of Mr. Hart by the citizens of this community was indeed most fortunate. He, too, is made to take care of the crowd at the next meeting on Monday, March 21, but suggests that all persons planning to attend come early to be assured of seats."

Several other persons addressed the meeting and pledged their support in behalf of the candidates. The committee on arrangements states that every effort will be made to take care of the crowd at the next meeting on Monday, March 21, but suggests that all persons planning to attend come early to be assured of seats.

Tuesday evening last the city council heard protests on the application of Victor Dupont and J. W. Morey for a permit to conduct a miniature dog course. The council chamber was crowded to the door. All the members of the council were present except Dale who is confined to his home with illness.

After much discussion, the council, by a unanimous vote, denied the application which was backed up by a lengthy petition signed by the merchants of the city. Four petitions against the track were presented at the meeting. One was from the Menlo Park Woman's Club and another was on behalf of the trustees and congregation of the Menlo Park Presbyterian Church, who objected on the grounds that the proposed racing scheme would constitute a moral hazard and would provide no economic benefit.

Dupont, in a typewritten statement, explained the benefits that would result in establishing the track in Menlo Park, declaring that the unemployment problem would be solved, that the merchants would be benefited and that 25 family men would be employed at $4 a day. Dupont asserted that Menlo Park would have no unemployment and that the trades people would be happy and contented. Dupont was quizzed by Reverend Smith but not much of importance was elicited. W. T. Casey said he owned property on both sides of the contemplated track site and did not object to the enterprise but wanted to know who the sponsors for Dupont were.

Both the Rev. Ralph Smith, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, and the Rev. W. L. Bone, pastor of the Presbyterian church, spoke against the race track idea. The mayor declared that the project would be "likely to run away with" the promoters and had no place in a small town. The Rev. Mr. Bone expressed his belief that the "scrip" planned for use in paying options would be just another name for poker chips.

A. H. Tupper, secretary of the employment committee, opposed the granting of the permit as it would bring an undesirable element to the town. He declared there were no hungry men in town—that they had been taken care of. The sum of $1400 had been paid out of the $1800 donated to the committee.

After all the arguments had been heard, Blake suggested that the matter go over for the reason that Dale was not present. Crane urged definite action at once. He applied his motion picture camera, saying by requesting but he did not think the enterprise feasible. Anderson seconded the motion.

Dupont, almost single-handed, put up a good battle, but lost. He took his defeat good naturedly.

Valley Paving Construction Company was given 60 days to complete its work on Live Oak avenue. Blake objected to the continuance, saying, "it was only a white wash" that the work should have been completed long ago.

Douglass and Rickert, new owners of the Pastime Billiard Parlors, were granted permission to continue under the former permit. Blake voted no on the motion to grant the permit.

A petition was read from property owners on Santa Cruz avenue asking that signs be placed on the avenue to prevent speeding. The matter was referred to the chief of police as was the request of F. J. Furnival to have branches of trees removed from his property.

The girl Scouts were given $10 in their drive for funds. Election officers for the election to take place on Monday, April 11, were appointed as follows: T. B. Hunnell, Mrs. Ruth Banks, clerks; Mrs. Margaret Gale, judge; James Armstrong, inspector. They will receive $10 each for their services. The polls will open at 7 and close at 7 p. m.

The council adjourned to March 22. Mother Foley, principal of St. Joseph's Parochial school, who last week met with a severe accident is recovering nicely. This will be glad news to her many friends in Menlo Park.

The Menlo Park Auxiliary of the American Legion gave a banquet on Tuesday evening in commemoration of the birthday anniversary of Mrs. P. Blanchard, wife of the commander of Menlo Post.

Following a long illness Michael Sullivan, aged 71, and a native of County Kerry, Ireland, passed away last Monday. He was a resident of Menlo Park for over 30 years. The last years of his long life were spent at Atherton. He was beloved by all who knew him. He is survived by his devoted wife, Rose Sullivan, two children, Frank Sullivan, a conductor on the coast line of the Southern Pacific for many years, and a daughter, Mrs. C. L. Herbrank, a prominent society leader of Alameda. The funeral on Wednesday was largely attended by relatives and friends. The interment was at Holy Cross Cemetery, Colma.

Arbor Day was duly observed by the local fraternal organizations in this city by planting a redwood tree at Fremont school, St. Joseph's parochial grounds, and at the Central school. Mayor Weeden was chairman of the day, making a short address at each of those places. A brief ceremony took place at the school grounds. At Fremont, Rev. Smith delivered the invocation. Father Kennedy spoke feelingly of the life of Washington, declaring that truth and honesty were the characteristics of the Father of His Country. At the Central school Rev. Bone prefaced his invocation by a splendid address, paying a tribute to the memory of Washington, also speaking eloquently of the nobleness of the California redwoods. A nice program was rendered in the auditorium of the school. The orator of the day was Charles R. Boden, assistant public defender of San Francisco. The young man delivered a scholarly address that was listened to with extreme attention by the large audience. The bi-centennial of Washington was also included in the celebration.

The stage is set for the big St.

Patrick's entertainment at the Church of the Nativity on March 16. The program this year is better than ever before and the predictions are that the crowd will be a record-breaking one. This annual frolic began nearly 50 years ago, growing in popularity with the passing years and becoming a fixture with the people of Menlo. The people look forward to this event with the deepest anticipation.

Among the entertainers to appear are Doakes & Doakes of KFRC, the San Mateo County Elks' band, Rudolph Swall, lyric tenor; a double quartet under the direction of Otis M. Carrington; the O'Neill sisters of San Francisco; a group of specialty performers headed by Thomas J. Kane, and the Elks' double quartet.

Sheriff McGrath will appear in his latest specialties, while Dr. McGovern will have a number of new songs and jokes.

Get your seats early for when the curtain rises standing room will be at a premium.

Miss May Hannigan, a former resident of Menlo Park, passed away in San Francisco following a lingering illness last Monday morning. Several from here attended the funeral on Wednesday morning. The deceased was a sister of the late Father Jerome B. Hannigan, who was pastor of the Church of the Nativity when Camp Fremont was located here. He was a talented singer and preacher. During his pastorate Miss Hannigan lived with him and made many friends in Menlo Park by her sweet manner and charming ways.

Councilman W. E. Dale has been confined to his home for the past few days with a severe cold. He expects to be at his place of business early next week.

In a hotly contested election for trustees of the Menlo Park sanitary district, the incumbents, Lawrence H. Cook and John B. Glunz, were returned to the board with substantial majorities. Five hundred and ninety-nine votes were cast. Of these Cook received 380, Glunz 369, Basil F. Cain 217 and Hamilton Morton 189.

Mrs. Burton Oliver Parrish, who passed away in Mount Sinai Hospital, New York, on March 4, was widely known in Menlo Park some years ago when she was the wife of Felton Elkins, grandson of the late Senator Charles N. Felton. While here she was a leader of peninsula society. After her divorce from Elkins she shortly after married Parrish and moved to New York to reside. The remains will be brought to California for burial. She was the daughter of Mrs. John C. Breckenridge Oliver.

"For the first time in the memory of man robins are meeting in the gardens of Berkeley," says the Call-Bulletin. Fat, perky fellows with yellow breasts are hunting worms, ravaging the flowering trees, building nests, raising families. You may consider that a very nice compliment, but the bird authorities say the robins are there because the winter in the mountains has been so severe. That's nothing; robins nested in the Raymond estate last year, rearing large families and on the O'Keefe place near by two robins nested, raising a brood of four birds. Berkeley has nothing on Menlo Park in this respect.

COSTLY STEW
TACOMA, Wash. — Stew is one of the world's commonest dishes, but the Joe Marchesini family found it can be one of the most expensive. They were having stew for dinner when Game Warden George Mitchell walked in. He sniffed the stew, inspected it, and found the breasts of three quails in it. As quails are protected in this state, Joe was fined $30—$10 for each bird.
